ABOUT COMMUNITY LEARNING AND DEVELOPMENT

The role of Community Learning and Development (CLD) is to support individuals, groups, and communities to make a positive change in their lives or in their community by using a range of different approaches. CLD covers a broad range of practice including youth work, community-based adult learning, family learning, volunteer development and community development.

They are based in the council offices on School Place, however they work across the community from various venues depending on the individuals and groups they are working with.

HOW TO ACCESS SUPPORT

There are various methods of accessing Community Learning and Development services. This can be done through contacting the team or referral forms and self-referrals are accepted.

WHO CAN ACCESS SUPPORT

Community Learning and Development are an all-age service and adapt/develop their work to meet the needs of the people they work with.

There is no defined group of individuals that they work with, however one of the core principles of CLD is to work with individuals and groups to promote equity, inclusion and social justice.

WHAT SUPPORT IS AVAILABLE

The Community Learning and Development team can offer support to individuals on a one-to-one basis and also through group work sessions.

They work with people of all ages through youth work, community development, adult learning, family learning and employability support.
